

Amy Valentine
Chief Financial Officer
SFERRA

Amy Valentine is the CFO of SFERRA, which is a 125-year old company that designs and distributes luxury linen products for the home. SFERRA uses premium materials and techniques from the finest European mills, and distributes its product through a diverse network of highly consultative luxury boutiques, department stores, as well as direct-to-consumer on its website. The company is backed by Levine Leichtman Capital Partners. When Amy joined SFERRA in 2015, she partnered with the new CEO to achieve a number of important initiatives, such as honing the design direction of the line, improving inventory management and costing, and launching a new ecommerce site. Prior to SFERRA, Amy was the VP of Finance at Chromalox, a private equity backed industrial products company based in Pittsburgh, PA. During Amy's tenure at Chromalox, the company underwent two very successful private equity sales. Amy received recognition from NJBIZ magazine for their top 50 women in business award, and prior to that was named among Pittsburgh magazine's "40 under 40". Amy has an undergraduate degree from Grove City College and an MBA from the University of Pittsburgh.